James is naturally a people person. He spoke of a time when he was quite young, in kindergarten, he had a habit of going up to all of his classmates and giving each child a hug and saying "hello". For unknown reasons, his teacher had an issue with this and called James' parents into a conference. She implied there was "something wrong with James, because every morning he hugged all the children and said hello." Fortunately, James' father stood up for him and told the teacher "there is nothing wrong with my son." James has maintained his friendly, outgoing disposition and added in charm. He is talkative, knowledgeable, adaptive and interesting. He certainly can hold up his end of the conversation through a philosophical discussion.

James calls himself a community guy; he says its "fun to be with people". He loves spending time with family and friends, going for walks, having a coffee, having dinner together and then watching a film. He loves animals, too. James is also an outdoors guy with a passion for kayaking, hiking, and other activities. He does yoga and mediation as well as runs and walks. These are his passions outside of acting.

James spoke of his imagination and the fact there is "something inside him that needs to get out" when discussing being an actor. He also spoke of his disposition which is to try not to judge people. James also said he is a spiritual person and that there is a "vibe" that we get off of each other, making it easier to understand the other and to connect. James has been classically trained as an actor and spoke of teachers/authors such as Meisner, Stanislavski and Utah Hagen as examples of methods of acting he has studied.

James has a feature film called Foodland in which he starred coming out this fall. The film was written and directed by Adam Smoluk and produced by Juliette Hagopian. In August/September, James will star in his own feature called Candyland based on a book by Elizabeth Engstrom. The script for Candyland was co-written by Rusty Nixon. Earlier in the year, James worked on Supernatural

1. Have a clear vision, a positive attitude and believe it will happen. It can't go wrong
2. Know where you are going. Know where point A is and where the end result is and don't worry too much about the path to get there, as it will happen.
3. Don't put labels on things. It is what it is

Pet Peeves

1. Laziness
2. Not taking advantage of something that could make a person happy.
3. Everything is fluid in life. Maybe the purpose of life is to learn how to adapt to this.
